Dear Mr./Ms. Last Name:

I would like to inform you that I am resigning from my position as Account Executive for the Smith Agency, effective August 1.

Thank you for the opportunities for professional and personal development that you have provided me during the last five years.

I have enjoyed working for the agency and appreciate the support provided me during my tenure with the company.

If I can be of any help during this transition, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Can the tone of my resignation letter later hurt me?

Yes! Are you considering writing a resignation letter to vent your feelings or get even? That is the wrong approach.

If you are angry or see your resignation letter as an opportunity to get revenge, follow this rule: write your letter and set it aside for a day or so. Once you are calm, rewrite it in a way that will help you get future jobs because:

- ← You may want to reapply for another job with your current employer. Many people do.
- ← Future employers may call your old boss.
- ← Your colleagues are watching you as you transition away from your present job. You'll probably want to network with them for your next job.
- ← Your letter of resignation is the last reflection of your character.
- ← Now is the time for grace and class, not revenge.

What should my resignation letter accomplish?

- ← Maintain professional relationships
- ← Maintain your dignity
- ← Keep doors open (don't burn bridges)
